► A mother and a father are two examples of family members. Grandparents and siblings are also part of many families.

2. Why is it important to respect and help our family members? (0 Marks)

► Respecting and helping family members builds trust and makes the home a happy and caring place for everyone to live in.

3. What are some fun things people can do at a mela? (0 Marks)

► People can enjoy rides, watch performances, play games, and eat different kinds of food at a mela.

4. Why should we stay close to our family or group while visiting a crowded mela? (0 Marks)

► Staying close helps us avoid getting lost in the crowd and ensures our family knows where we are at all times.

5. Name two festivals celebrated in India and one thing people do during them. (0 Marks)

► Diwali is celebrated with lights and sweets, and Eid is celebrated with prayers and feasting with family and friends.

6. How do festivals help bring people and communities together? (0 Marks)

- Festivals give people a chance to meet, celebrate together, share food, and strengthen relationships within families and communities.

7. What is the difference between a family member and a friend? (0 Marks)

- A family member is someone related to us by birth or marriage, while a friend is someone we choose to build a close relationship with, often outside our family.

8. Why might people carry money carefully when going to a mela? (0 Marks)

- Carrying money carefully helps prevent it from being lost or stolen in the crowded environment of a mela.

9. Name one value or lesson that festivals often teach us. (0 Marks)

- Festivals often teach us about sharing, gratitude, unity, and celebrating together with the people we love.

10. What can you learn about a community by observing the festivals it celebrates? (0 Marks)

- We can learn about a community's traditions, beliefs, and the things they value or celebrate together.

11. Why do you think it is important to be polite and kind to shopkeepers or workers at a mela? (0 Marks)

- Being polite and kind shows respect for others and helps create a pleasant experience for everyone at the mela, including the workers.

12. Give an example of how friends can help each other. (0 Marks)

- Friends can help each other by sharing things, offering support when someone is sad, or helping with schoolwork.

13. Why do different families have different traditions? (0 Marks)

- Different families come from different backgrounds, cultures, and beliefs, which shapes the traditions they follow and celebrate.

14. What should you do if you get separated from your family at a mela? (0 Marks)

- You should stay calm, look for a trusted adult like a guard or shopkeeper, and ask for help to find your family.

SECTION C — Short Answer Questions (Explain) (3 Marks each)

1. Explain why families are considered an important part of our lives, using examples from your own understanding. (0 Marks)

- Families provide love, care, and support to each member, especially children who depend on parents and elders for guidance.
- Families teach us important values like honesty, respect, and responsibility from a young age.
- Even when family members are different from one another, they usually care for and help each other during both happy and difficult times.

2. Describe what a visit to a mela might be like, including the sights, sounds, and activities you might experience. (0 Marks)

- At a mela, you might see colourful stalls selling toys, food, and handmade crafts.
- You would likely hear music, people talking and bargaining, and perhaps rides or games making noise.
- Activities could include playing games, going on rides, watching performances, and eating festive food with family or friends.

3. Explain why celebrating festivals is important for a community, using at least two reasons. (0 Marks)

- Festivals bring people together, helping build stronger bonds within families and communities.
- They also help preserve traditions and cultural values, passing them on from one generation to the next.
- Festivals often involve happiness and gratitude, which improves the overall wellbeing of people who take part in them.

4. Compare a family gathering with a visit to a mela - what is similar and what is different between the two? (0 Marks)

- Both events involve spending time with people we care about and can include food, fun, and celebration.
- However, a family gathering usually happens at home or a familiar place with close relatives, while a mela is a public place with many strangers, various stalls, and activities.
- Despite the differences, both experiences can create happy memories and strengthen relationships.

5. Why is safety important when visiting a crowded place like a mela? Give at least two safety tips. (0 Marks)

- Crowded places can make it easy to get lost or separated from family, so safety is very important.
- One safety tip is to always hold an adult's hand or stay close to your group.
- Another safety tip is to remember a meeting point or your family's contact information in case you get separated.

6. Explain how India's many different festivals show the country's diversity, using examples. (0 Marks)

- India has festivals like Diwali, Eid, Christmas, and Baisakhi, each celebrated by different communities with their own customs.
- This variety shows that India is home to many religions, cultures, and traditions living together.
- Despite these differences, festivals are often a time when everyone, regardless of background, joins in celebration and goodwill.

SECTION D — Long Answer Questions (5 Marks each)

1. Write a detailed description of your own family, including who is part of it, and explain why family is important to you. (0 Marks)

- This is a personal, open-ended answer based on the student's own family.
- A good answer should name family members (such as parents, siblings, or grandparents) and describe their roles or relationships.
- The answer should also explain why family matters - for example, providing love, support, guidance, or a sense of belonging - connecting personal experience to the chapter's themes.

2. Imagine you are going to a mela with your family. Describe your experience from arriving to leaving, including what you see, do, and how you stay safe.

(0 Marks)

- This is a creative, open-ended answer; a strong response should describe arriving at the mela, seeing stalls, rides, and food.
- It should include activities like playing games or trying food, and mention safety practices like staying close to family or holding hands.
- The description should end with leaving the mela, perhaps mentioning happy memories or things bought or experienced.

3. Write about a festival that you or your family celebrates, describing what you do during the festival and why it is meaningful to you. (0 Marks)

- This is a personal, open-ended answer based on the student's own experience or knowledge of a festival.
- A good answer should name the festival, describe specific activities or traditions (such as lighting lamps, exchanging sweets, praying, or decorating the house), and explain why the festival is meaningful - for example, bringing family together or celebrating an important event.
- The response should reflect an understanding of festivals as a way of connecting with family, community, and tradition.
